New English Program Taught to All Grades

Preparations were made all summer at the Instructional Resource Center for the New Title III English program. On Saturday, October 2, English teachers attended the first of four one-day workshop during the year. Consultants from the University of Alabama and local administrations led these sessions. Emphasis was placed on reading, oral communication, and composition skills. New materials were available to assist both teachers and students. The major issue of the program was to prevent duplication or omission of important learning activities.

Students were phased for three six-weeks periods during the year, based on an evaluation by teachers and standard tests, which showed the level of achievement of the students.

Two new teachers were added to the English department. They were Mrs. Diana Pepperman, who also teaches speech, and Mrs. Wanda Ponthier.

Juniors Bring Change to Prom

Led by their class officers, juniors combined their talents to build a float for the homecoming parade. Their float, which used the theme, "Mother Goose Expects Another Tiger Victory", won first prize.

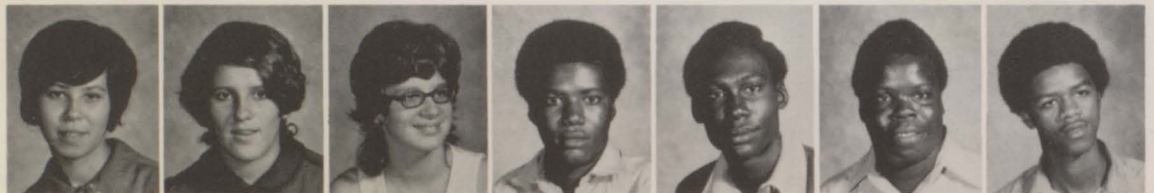

Class rings were ordered on February 10, and juniors voted to receive them in the spring of this year. This was a first for a junior class.

To raise money for the Junior-Senior Prom, which was held March 24, they held bake sales and sold first aid kits and fire extinguishers. The traditional prom gained a new appeal this year, because it was held at the Municipal Auditorium in Mobile. It featured the theme, "Memories". The band Canyon played for the guests.

Sophomores Enter Float in Parade

Building a float for the homecoming parade was the first project for the sophomore class this year. They constructed a large pumpkin and a Tiger player standing over his fallen opponents, modeling their float after the nursery rhyme, "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater".

The Sophomore Hop was held at the National Guard Armory on April 29. A bake sale was held to raise the money for this project.

The sophomore float's theme was "Tiger, Tiger, Bobcat Eater".

342 Freshmen Register And Become a Class

342 Students registered as freshmen and became the new class on campus. Participating in the football season soon found them organized and engaged in class projects. Three freshmen won spots as cheerleaders on the B-team squad. The spirit jug was awarded to the class at a weekly pep rally. The homecoming float "Ding Dong Bell, Bob cat's in the Well" required the effort of many class members. An outing at the beach brought the year's activities to a close for next year's sophomores.

Freshman float parades around the square at homecoming.
