The spirit rose as the confetti flew at a Friday afternoon pep rally.

More Than

Everyone had a balloon, even Senior football player, Rick Garner.

Just another . . .

Friday Night

This football season may not go down in history as one of record breaking scores, but it will be remembered for one very important reason. This was the year PRIDE came back to our school.

Thanks to Coach Gary Atkins and the mighty Tigers, spirit soared as the team showed us just what they could do. Soon we weren't just going to pep rallies, we were cheering at pep rallies. We weren't just going to football games, we were going to football games rain or shine. We weren't just talking about supporting the team, we were standing behind them, win or lose. And, oh, how good it felt to win. That emotional victory over Fairhope brought back the memories of seasons past.

The football players might not have known it, but their changed attitudes were what started it all. The minute they stepped out on the field at that first football game against Robertsedale, we all knew something was different. They were no longer separate individuals playing a game; they were a team that worked together and supported each other. This cooperation won football games, drew the whole school together and brought back PRIDE.

This edition of the Balcoala is dedicated to the football team that brought PRIDE back to our school.

Football players do more than tackle, as Gavin shows in O.C.

Coach Atkins takes the time to do one of the less important jobs of coaching, counting jerseys.

Pride

“Pride (prīd) n. A sense of one’s own worth,” but it was more than that. It was wearing a letterman jacket or a booster badge. Pride was participating in the campus clean-up project, and it was spending recess and lunch socializing with good friends in senior square. School had become more than just a place to go between 8:00 and 3:00; it was a place we could take pride in. We might not have won every game or had the best school, but we had good people who took pride in our school and those people made up for every other deficiency.

It seemed to rain on every important day or night, but Etheridge Means is prepared for anything.

Susan Smith and Karen Roley take in the sights and sounds of lunch.

Student Life

Chances were, if you asked us what we were wearing, it was a "coke" shirt, the hottest fashion item of the year. If you asked us where we were going, it was to a dance, because Homecoming, the Prom, the Freshman Frolic, and the Sophomore Hop took up the nights on our calendars. Our days were filled with parades of all shapes and sizes. There were the sad and solemn parades of O.C.S., the rushing mass of students to the buses after the bell, and of course the ordinary parades around the square. We all boosted spirit and pride by participating in school activities. Finally, Dawn Helms showed us what a winner really was, when she came away with the title of Baldwin County's Junior Miss.

Scott Jenkins, Cherle Zalfas, Todd King, Kellie Newberry, Beth Wurst, Sonya Reed, Stephen McDaniels, Gena Roland, and Carmen Mothershed seem to be saying, "It's really red, white, and you."

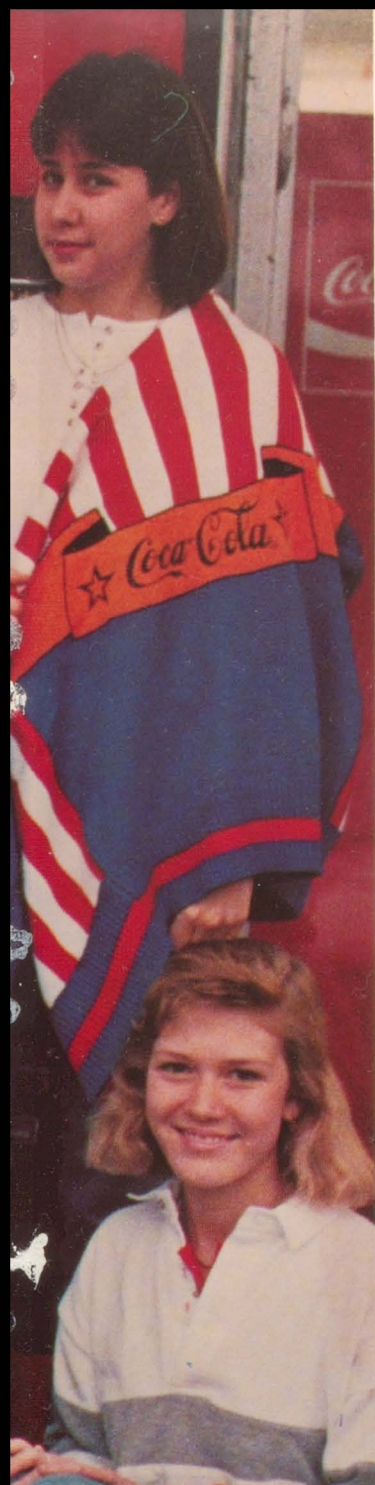

Not only are the students in style, but the teachers are also coming out and showing us what they've got, as seen by Mrs. Parnell, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. McMillian, and Mrs. Hudson.

Pam Pridgeon and Jenny Jurjevich show off the safari look.

"Ca-Ca-Ca-Catch the Wave!"

Red, White and You

"Coke is it!" There was some argument on this as far as taste, but as for clothing—Coke made the scene. The kids caught not only the coke wave, but the fashion wave as well. There was a new wave in hairstyles, from the 50's flat top and layered cut to the long hair in the fashionable banana clips. Yes, the surf was up on the coast, but most liked to stay back in the jungle in their khaki pants and bright safari printed tops.

Meanwhile back on the streets, the old traditional denim was topped off with gold and silver purses, belts, and shoes. On the other hand, there was a softer look as long sweater dresses were touched up with classical lace collars. Everyone had his own wave and rode it well.

Lacy collars and suspenders are demonstrated here by Ashleigh Lipscomb, Jeffrey Redmond, Chaney Hinote, Robin Campbell, Byron Robinson and Amanda Hastey.

Susan Chason and Wendy Hardin model the renewed interest in metallic accessories and the rediscovery of silver jewelry.

PARADING

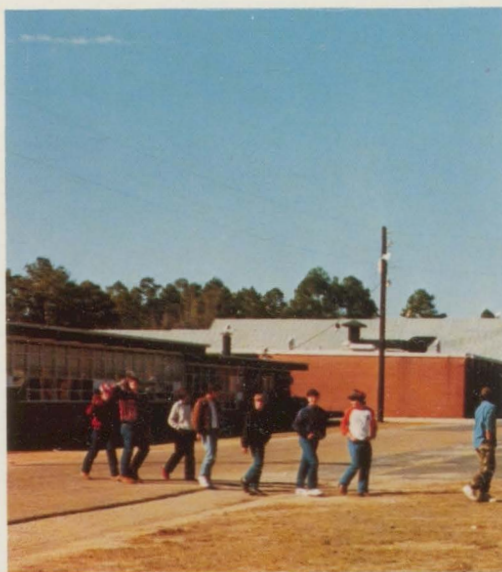

From here to there

We participated in many parades during the year. There were the Homecoming and Christmas Fest parades; they weren't Mardi Gras, but they were just as exciting. There was also the parade of over 100 cars, led by the seniors, in honor of the football team. During the dreaded three-day O.C.S. "vacations," we marched to and from recess and lunch in silent single file lines. Finally, the mad dash to cars, buses, and lockers after the bell was the one parade in which everyone participated.

After the parade, Chaney Hinote and Scotty Lewis wait with excitement for the ping-pong ball drop.

Elizabeth Forehand leads the band with confidence.

Ralph Amos and Melissa Harris anticipate the Christmas Fest Parade.

"Forward March!" is the command heard by the line of nameless students spending their "vacation" in O.C.S.

Interact Favorites Pam Averitt and Tiffany Watts do one of the fun jobs; riding in a parade.

Randy Presley, senior, really enjoys his last parade as a Key Club member.

A birds-eye view of the "crowd" rushing down the corridor.

Everyone hurries to catch the best seat on the bus.

Her smile shows you just how much Kym Rhodes likes being in a parade.

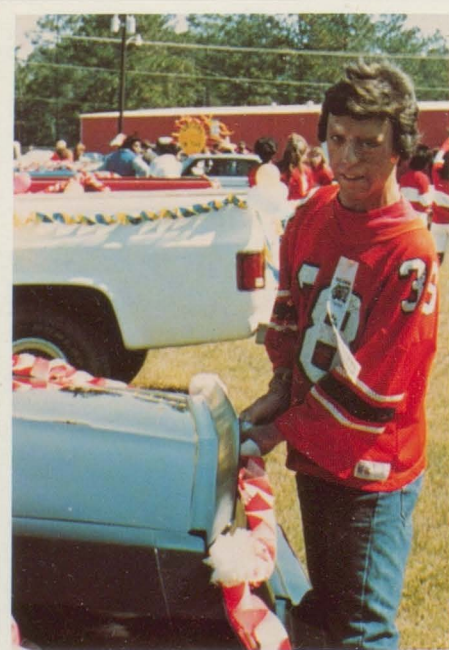

Homecoming:

There's nothing else like it!

Yes, Homecoming was more than just an ordinary, everyday event; spirit, enthusiasm, and excitement could be seen everywhere.

Many styles of dress came out at school. Senior square looked like a kindergarten one day and a funeral home the next, when seniors dressed as little kids and mourners at a funeral. Some of the other clothes were so tacky that it hurt our eyes to look at them.

Despite the fact that we had six-weeks exams to study for, every spare moment was spent working on the floats. As the big event drew closer, we were undernourished from the unbalanced meals eaten at McDonald's during rare breaks.

Billy Brown does his part to boost spirit by decorating a car for the parade.

"Little Lizzy" (Forehand) feels much better now that her best buddy has joined her.

Have you ever seen a funeral with so much spirit? Melissa Stacey, Dana Davis, Toni Reid, Kym Rhodes, and others help put the gators in the grave.

Angela Richerson and Tina Chambliss combine their talents on the details of the junior class float.

Tyrone Thompson and Colleen Stevens lead the "pep squad" in enthusiasm.

Homecoming

By week's end, the feelings of excitement had built to ones of anticipation. At the game, couples sat together to ease tension, but at the dance they sat together for fun. Dressed in everything from high heels to bare feet, from trench coats to traditional suits, we waited in line for pictures for over an hour, but still had time to dance to a few of our favorite songs. Even though our pictures didn't turn out so great, our memories did.

Sondra Myers and Norma Jean Peppenhorst fold napkins for the freshman float.

Stephanie Caprara may be dressed tackily, but her way of cheering will never go out of style.

The Tiger on the junior float is "Looking for a Heartbeat."

Pep Fest

The Original and the Bazaar

The classes rushed to put the finishing touches on their homecoming floats so that they could come cheer on the Tigers at the 2nd Annual Pep Fest. Many people participated in a multitude of skits and parades. The Juniors showed us the "terrified" all-girl football team, and the Seniors sang their own B.C.H.S. version of "Surfing USA." The teachers proved they could do more than grade papers when they presented their ideas of cheerleaders from different time periods. Finally, in the last few minutes of the Pep Fest, we were introduced to two new cheerleaders, Mr. Duck and Mr. Rieben.

Lisa White, Dawn Helms, Lisa Tisdale and Dana Davis like to "surf" with the Tigers.

The teachers had just as much fun as the students did at the Pep Fest.

Junior Miss— Dreams do come true

When we asked the Jr. Misses what they got out of Junior Miss, they instantly replied it was friendship, a sisterhood, and an experience that would last them a lifetime.

We had five talented girls representing us in the pageant: Lani Gordon played "Festival of the Clouds" on the piano for her talent; Kym Rhodes sang "Can't Say No" from Oklahoma, and Christy Watts sang "That's What Friends Are For" and was in the top eleven.

Halli Corbett, who tap-danced to, "Rock Around the Clock," was in the top eleven, won Physical Fitness, and received Second Runner-up.

Dawn Helms, who won Baldwin County's Jr. Miss, played a piece on the piano called "Le Polichimelle," tied for Scholastic Achievement, and received the Spirit of Jr. Miss, and Poise and Appearance. Dawn represented us well on the state level. She won Second Runner-Up and the Spirit of Jr. Miss Award.

Kym Rhodes demonstrates her talent at the Junior Miss and sings her song "Can't Say No."

Dawn Helms, while at State Competition, accepts the flowers of congratulations for Second Runner-Up.

Lani Gordon, Kym Rhodes, Christy Watts, Dawn Helms, and Halli Corbett take time out to do what they do best, "pose pretty."

This is the Time.

A special aura of excitement filled the air at the baseball game. The reason why—Prom. During the day the young men were found in baseball suits and casual clothes, but that evening they were found in tuxedos and the beautiful young women were embellished in elegant dresses.

The Prom was unique in the fact that it was held at the Mobile Hilton for the first time. The tables were decorated with arrangements of flowers tied with royal blue and silver ribbon to add to the romantic touch.

For the Seniors, this was their last big dance—this was that one very special night that they had looked forward to since their first day of high school. It was the graduation of dances—The Prom.

After being crowned Prom Queen and King, Jo Linder and Rusty Hinson dance to the hit song, "Never Say Goodbye."

Mrs. Scott enjoys the refreshments after working hard to make the Prom a success.

Seniors wait patiently in line to hear their names called out for Senior leadout.

Lynn Melton, Wally Melton, Tammy Morgan, Tracy Mitchem, Charles Shaffer Edith Horace and Douglas Brown talk quietly as they wait for Senior leadout.

Gena Glasgow and Tim Stewart anxiously await the announcement of Prom Queen and King.

Dione Bryant and Tim Almee wait patiently to get their Prom pictures taken.

Celebrating a night to remember, everyone enjoys dancing to the newest hit songs.

Somewhere out there

freshmen frolic

Bright and early Saturday morning March 28, while most of us were in bed, those few hard working Freshmen were up at City Hall preparing for the big night—the Freshmen Frolic. The hours spent hanging up streamers and preparing the back drop were worth the work after the couples arrived and enjoyed the evening . . . out there.

Amanda Hastie and her date Todd King dance the night away to the beat of the Bangles.

Robin Troutt makes sure every minute with her date Andy Shaddix is funfilled.

J.J. Zackary and his date take advantage of the theme Somewhere Out There to get a little closer.

Jerome Smith watches over his date Yolanda Morrison to make sure he is her center of attention.

Nothings Gonna Stop Us

The City Hall was filled with excited Sophomores dressed in semi-formals and suits Saturday, April 4. Colorful streamers hung from the ceiling, and refreshments such as cookies, punch, and crackers were ready to be enjoyed by the students. The loud music, friends, and decorations made the Sophomore Hop a very special night.

The Sophomore Hop was a special night for Janet Bolling, as she dances to the popular hit song, "Lean on Me."

The dance floor became crowded as everyone joined in to dance to the theme song, "Nothings Gonna Stop Us Now."

Academics

If we weren't taking notes in history, we were learning theorems in geometry. We sat in chemistry and physics and tried to calculate formulas to blow-up the lab. Those in Biology I and II were learning ways to dissect frogs and animals without getting sick. For those of us lucky enough to take typing, typewriters became "ugly, little monsters that ate paper". While many of us had trouble mastering our native tongue, some brave souls struggled to learn a foreign language.

We may not have loved every class, but we certainly didn't hate all of them either. We used classtime to make friends or we caught a few "... ZZZ's" that we had missed the night before.

Finally, even if we didn't want to admit it, we learned a few of the skills we were supposed to. Some of our teachers even made class fun with field trips and extra activities. Classes were more than just somewhere to go six times a day, five days a week.

Courses in social studies were required courses for students. They consisted of Alabama history, world history, American history, American government, and economics. Through speakers, films, and newspapers, the Social Studies department tried to impress upon the students the importance of knowing the past and realizing that this knowledge could aid in solving problems of the present and future.

Chad Harrelson, Sam Lackey, Mrs. Dean, Donna Howell, Monica Patience, Kim Parsons, and Steven Welch demonstrate the different dress of the third world countries.

Lisa Tisdale demonstrates to Kelli Newberry and Shane Clemmons how to measure the velocity of a falling object.

Courses in sciences were offered as both required and elective courses, depending on the subject. These courses consisted of physical science, biology, Biology II, chemistry, and physics. These courses helped students better understand their relationship to their environment. They also encouraged independent research and experimentation in order to develop students' reasoning ability.

megabytes of hard work and fun

Computer lab, taught by Mrs. Fran Pridgeon, was the very center for preparing for our future. From teaching third graders how to type to teaching high school business classes spreadsheets, Mrs. Pridgeon and her assistants worked diligently throughout the year.

Toni Reid works diligently on one of the many projects the lab assistants must complete each six weeks.

Helping Mrs. Pridgeon wasn't all lab assistants did, all lab assistants had assignments and were always kept busy. But, no one complained; because without Mrs. Pridgeon and her computer lab, we would not have been prepared for our future.

"Math and English are so boring. I am getting so tired of the same thing every year."

Although some students did not enjoy it, English and math were part of almost everyone's yearly curriculum. Other courses many students took were typing, general business, office procedure, and record keeping.

Whether they took basic, regular, honors, or Advanced Placement English, they suffered through the same things. Vocabulary, grammar, oral reports, novel reading, and, for some, term papers were common in all of these.

Addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division were only the beginnings for some in math. Pre-Algebra, Algebra I, Geometry, Algebra II, and Advanced Mathematical Concepts was the step-ladder some followed.

The business courses helped prepare many for jobs after high school. Most of these required skill and a good understanding of the training.

Even though it sometimes seemed like they would last an eternity, the more students learned in these classes, the more they saw how essential they were.

There were a lot of subjects required to take during the sophomore year, but some of the more enjoyable ones were driver's education, home economics, health, agriculture and P.E. (physical education). In drivers Ed. instructors taught the proper techniques of driving that would develop into life-long habits.

In health, the coaches taught the fundamentals of having a healthy body and the effects that drugs, alcohol, and other harmful substances have on a body.

P.E. was an outlet that allowed students to exercise and keep a fit body. There were many types of sports that were offered, from weight lifting to deck tennis.

Home Economics was a course that taught students the survival skills that would enable them to plan and run a household smoothly.

Agriculture, better known as Ag., involved the study of soil development and animal and plant sciences to improve farming techniques.

Terry Grace observes the proper technique of driving by watching films while in the simulators.

Learning

say it in a big way

It was very unusual to have a teacher who actually encouraged talking in class, especially when you did not even understand what you were to say. However, Oral Communications, Spanish and French were courses that did require a lot of verbal activity.

Mrs. Pat Hudson, of Oral Communications, taught her students to do everything from demonstrating the uses of a rubber band to speaking on the challenge of American citizenship, Patriotic, persuasive, and character speeches, along with interpretive readings, demonstration skits, and debate, were all a part of Oral Communications.

Mrs. Josette Turner, who taught French, and Mrs. Sondra Gentry, who taught Spanish, were involved everyday in trying to teach a new language to the students. Not only did they learn new words but also about a different way of life. These courses included a study of the countries where these languages are spoken and of the culture as well.

A different kind of activity went on in art classes with Mr. Ardee Robinson. Although verbal activity was not the major concern, the students were able to express their ideas in other ways than talking.

Expressing your own ideas and opinions in very different ways was what these courses were all about. Whether they were understood by all or only a few, they helped us develop as individuals.

Faculty

encouraging young minds

The faculty of our school was the guiding force that made our school what it was. They performed services, provided meals, snacks, a clean campus, and administrative assistance. These tireless people began before the first student arrived, the first locker door slammed or the first echoes of students rang through the halls. They were often found in their rooms still working long after the last student had left. Even with the endless hours of hard work that they faced, they always found time for a student in need or some school activity that needed some support. The hard work that our faculty has put forth has paid off in student-teacher relationships and a better attitude on our campus, because encouraging young minds was the responsibility of our faculty.

Secretaries: Mrs. Garner, Mrs. Anderosn, Mrs. Bryars, Mrs. Dyess, Mrs. Harville keep the office running smoothly.

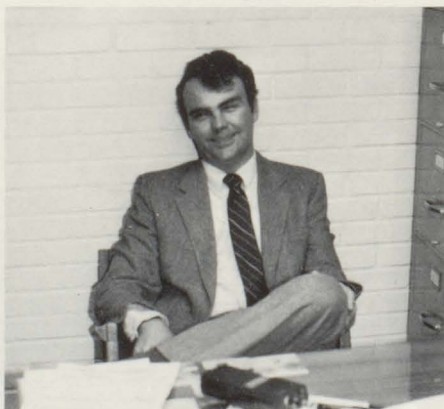

Mr. Duck, head principal, always has time for students and faculty.

Mr. Hardy, assistant principal, is always found with a cheery smile.

Mr. Salter, assistant principal, is always around to answer any questions.

Mr. Rieben, assistant principal, is always keeping tabs on students.

Mr. Salter, assistant principal, carries out some of the tedious tasks of being a principal.

School Board Members: Mr. Johnson, Dr. Rockwell, Mrs. Underwood, Mr. Jones, and Mr. Messick.

Mrs. Brewer functions as the A.R. teacher for Baldwin County.

Canteen Workers: Dollie Overstreet, Margaret Wallace, and Mary Mixson.

Counselors: Mrs. Howell, Mrs. Yelding, and Mr. Mixson always have time for students' problems, personal and academic.

Cafeteria Workers: Mrs. Henry, Mrs. Boyett, Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Adrett, Mrs. Conway, Mrs. Lambert, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Hadley, Mrs. McKay, Mrs. Hawkin, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Crooks, Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Williams, and Mrs. Cassidy.

Learning to the limit

To become a superior band, the members had to work very hard, and all the hard work paid off with a great reward. This reward was the feeling of accomplishment and of pride that caused the members of the band to share a great bond of love. The activities and the experiences together were ones that will be long remembered. The members had a special friendship that will last longer and will be stronger than many other friendships. It was this unity that made the band superior.

A superior band had to practice many hours after school to achieve superior ratings. Hard work and sweat were essential. Since hours and hours of practice were necessary, sometimes members became discouraged and ready to quit, but they soon realized that the hard work paid off.

The auxiliary practiced long hours for the football games and the competitions that they attended. Many hours after school were spent making up routines, dance steps, and practicing them over and over. The tigerettes went to the University of Southern Mississippi and received the spirit stick and also an overall superior. The majorettes went to Troy State University and received a trophy and an excellent plus rating. The flag corp didn't attend camp, but they practiced very hard here at home. The auxiliary added that extra special touch to every football game, basketball game, and pep rally, as well as boosting everyone's spirit.

Learning: A cut above the rest!

Being involved with the band required a lot of ambition. The goals that were set for each and every band member were high; but under the leadership of Bill Mann, every goal was reached when the band received a superior rating at the competitions. These contests were held in Milton, Fla., and all members of the band and auxiliary attended. The band performed at many events such as the political rally, Veterans Day, and, of course, football games. No one appreciated the band more than the students who had put out the extra effort.

Learning: Practice

makes pride

Everyone has heard the statement that practice makes perfect; well, the choral department gave this statement a new meaning by proving that practice also made pride. It was hours upon hours of practice that gave each chorus member that sense of pride felt after each performance. Practice was the essence of perfection that was heard as the curtain opened and the choir sang in unison. It was practice that made the audience want to hear the choir sing one more with the same distinction which proved that practice made pride.

Learning: perform- ance and perfection

With determination and perserverance, the choral department arose to a state of perfection. Making performances at locations such as Faulkner, Halliday Park, and Dauphin Way Baptist Church, the choir portrayed a successful image found in no other group. They were joined together as students who believed in the unity and the power of music. By leaving a profound effect upon their listeners, they proved to be a choir worthy of recognition.

Learning:

key notes

"I'll never reach this note!" murmured the frustrated soprano as she practiced her piece of music. Despite how difficult things might have been, the chorus worked to develop their vocal skills. They mastered such tasks as climbing octaves in order to reach key notes. It was this type of development that gave each song a professional tone that warmed the heart of every listener.

Halll Corbett, Byron Dyess, Mr. Matson, Stephanie Caprara, and Karen Carter practice those difficult notes.

Linda Taylor and Kecla Cox join together in harmony.

Learning: Turning Pictures into Pride

It began with a small roll of film, a camera, and a blank layout that developed into an annual spread, which finally became a book composed of pictures and pride. This amazing process was made possible by a group of creative students known as the annual staff. The staff seemed to do the impossible by bringing a year's events into one book. This was not easy because there were photos to take, layouts to assign and, most importantly, deadlines to meet. Despite all these hassels, however, the annual staff brought it all together by turning a 35mm candid into 224 pages of pride.

Mrs. Hudson sits on her throne and delegates her powers to all staff members.

"What do you mean—you need this picture by tomorrow?" questions Bill Bradford to Mandi Northcutt and Lani Gordon.

First period annual: Mrs. Hudson, Halli Corbett, Stephanie Wise, Mandi Northcutt, Lani Gordon, Donna Kern, Heather Willis, Dan Quina, Bill Bradford, Becky Criswell, and Beth Wurst.

Sixth period annual: Gwen Godbey, Woody Woodman, Melissa Stacey, Cheryl Davis, Desi Havard, Sandy Bundy, George Halliday, Marcy Carroll, Angie Moody, Miranda Crook, and Cheri Zalfas.

More than just ...

People

Seniors: n. pl. People of highest rank or age, therefore worthy of a certain privilege (i.e. graduation) not offered to subordinates.

Juniors: n. pl. second in line to the throne, anxiously awaiting the day they can claim their rightful place at the top.

Sophomores: n. pl. people with aggressive conviction and wisdom, yet unaware of limitations and lack of maturity.

Freshman: n. pl. new faces on campus distinguished by wide eyes, open mouths, desperate looks on their faces.

Mr. and Miss B.C.H.S.

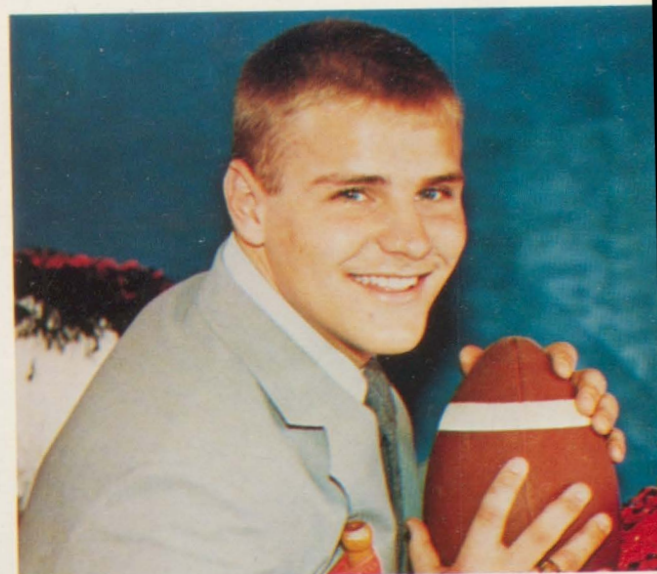

The Winning Combination

The student body voted for two fellow students who they thought best represented the title of Mr. and Miss BCHS, and Benny Davis and Joei Powell were selected for this honor.

Benny is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Davis of Bay Minette. He is a member of the Interact Club and plays on the football and baseball teams.

Joei is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hadley of Bay Minette, and Mr. Buck Powell of Atmore. She is an Interact Club favorite, a Tigerette, and a member of the swing choir and softball team. She was a homeroom president and a vice president for two years each.

Today— Tomorrow's history

An informal survey was taken of the senior class. Of the 240 students who responded, 29% chose to go into the Armed Forces. The choices were pretty evenly divided among the top five military branches. 64% of the students surveyed chose a college or university to attend. Some were close to home and some were far away; the university chosen farthest from home was U.C.L.A. The other 7% of the senior class were undecided about the future, sounded like presidential material to me.

in and out of love— the dating game

Christy Watts keeps a tight hold on her man, Scott Jenkins.

"I thought you'd agree," says
Woody Woodman to Lisa White.

Edith Horace stands by her man,
Douglas Brown.

"So what are you doing this weekend? Washing
your hair? All weekend?"

Some girls had the cleanest hair in the world. The guys, on the other hand, became expert hunters and fishermen. And, no matter how much they worked and earned, they never had a dime to their names.

There were the times,
however, when the guys did have money and the girls had done their chores; the guys still went night hunting,
but needed no light and no
gun.

Occupations

and preoccupations

Many students attended school for the required seven hours a day and then left campus to begin their many different jobs in town. These jobs were necessary for some, but for most they made the extras possible—insurance, gas, and date money. These financial obligations certainly helped foster a sense of responsibility. Although most days we wanted to be doing ANYTHING else; payday, of course, made the long hours bearable.

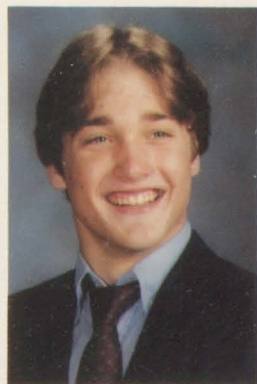

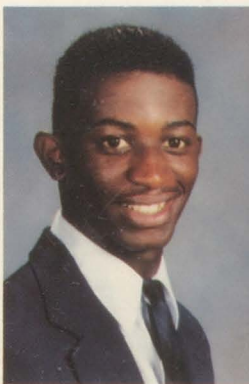

Toni Reid shows that work is more than just fun and games.

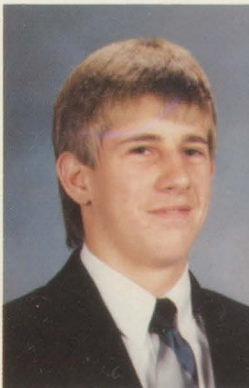

Adria Lamar works hard as a top K-mart employee.

Angle Middleton and Laura Brooks take their jobs, at Harco, seriously.

The best of times— The worst of times

When students were finally seniors, each event seemed larger and more important: The last football, baseball, or basketball game; the last prom, the last test, the last walk through senior square, the conversations at the lockers to and from class, the tough classes, the happy wins, the frustrating losses—those friends we would never see again. It was easy to wonder sometimes why we looked forward to this while over all, it had been great; it was our time to move on to whatever awaited us "out there." Meanwhile we reminisced over the best times of our lives.

George Halliday reads over his work before giving it to his teachers.

Kids

are Seniors, too!

The Kids took time to pose for a picture after a game of Duck-Duck Goose.

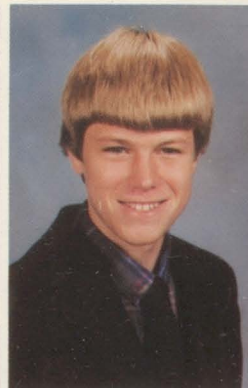

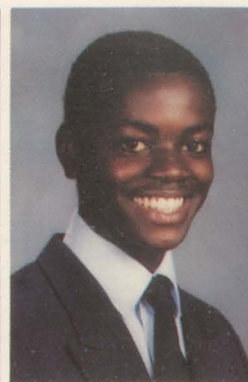

Diane Thompson, Yavie Hughes, Christine Cain, and Renee Sanders prove that the more friends you have, the better.

Michelle Barr cuddles with her furry friend in Senior square.

Upon their arrival at 8:00 am on Thursday morning, the Seniors seemed like a normal 12th grade class until it happened . . . a time warp.

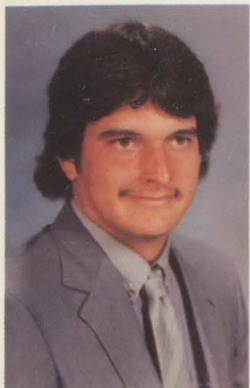

"I don't wanna grow up!" "Red rover, red rover send Dana right over." "Is that Halli Corbett jumping rope in Senior Square?"

During this odd day of Homecoming week, the school could have been mistaken for a nursery by onlookers who did not know that these were the sights and sounds of Seniors on Kid's Day.

“Social” studies— the way we play

What were the different “social” studies for the senior class? Was it cruising the town after school, and the parties at “Old Live Oak” or when someone’s parents left home for the weekend? Was it the time you went to a friend’s house with full intentions of studying for a test in government, but ended up “pigging out” on pizza, laughing the entire night, and failing the test?

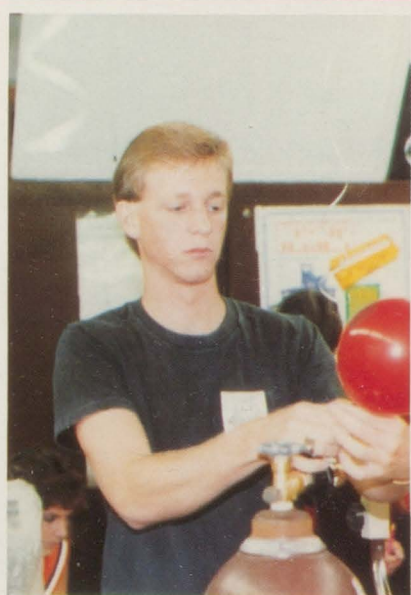

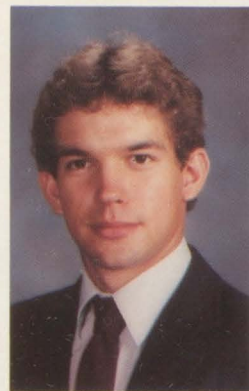

The seniors “social” studies were experienced as they practiced the senior skit for the Fairhope game and Pep-Fest, stood around the senior table, or participated in club functions.

As graduation approached, they tried to spend every moment together and promised each other they would keep in touch and be at every class reunion.

Phillip Presley and Scott Lambert spend their free time at school chatting with friends.

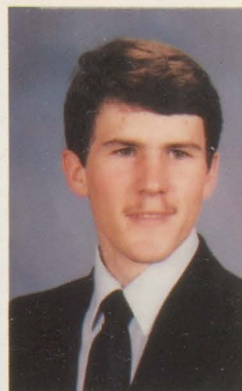

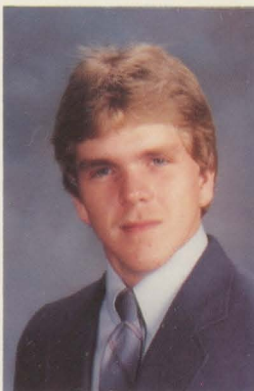

At recess and lunch you can always find Tracy Griffin, Lisa Morrison and friends socializing by the canteen.

Graduation:

"I don't want to go!"

This can't be right. Not me, not now. It was over too soon. I can't be graduating!"

It seemed just like a dream or, for some, a nightmare as lockers were cleaned out and final goodbyes were said to the underclassmen as they walked off campus for the last time as students.

It was not just another year for them, it was the last. A twelve year routine was being broken; a routine full of simple things that had been taken for granted such as seeing friends all day at school and then talking for hours on the phone after school. These things were quickly becoming memories.

This was the year that every high schooler dreamed of and planned for. It was the ideal year for every graduate, full of high hopes for the future and dreams that would never die.

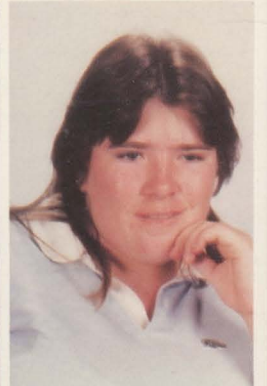

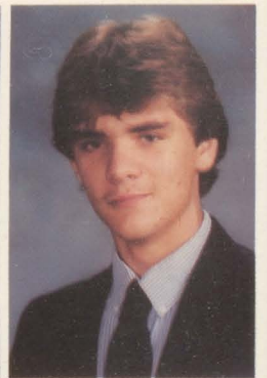

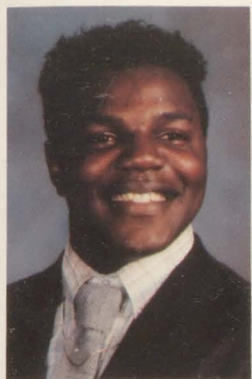

Teresa Barlow, Tracy Brooks and Karen Guyen enjoy each other's company during their last year.

Woody Woodman and Gavin Kostelecky show their pride for their school as they finish the club cheer during "Pride" Week.

Becky Milstid and Melissa Stacey don't want to grow up, and they don't want to graduate.

Rising above the crowd

For many, just getting through the sophomore year seemed to be a big accomplishment. No longer were they the bottom ring of the totem pole; they were on their way to the top. Three people emerged from the crowd to become the leaders of the class: Gary Bulman was elected class president and Pam McGinn and Carrie Scruggs were selected to be Vice-president and secretary/treasurer, respectively.

Call me Freshmen!

That was how the typical Freshman felt as he or she tried to adjust to the new surroundings of high school. They found that each day brought on new challenges and opportunities to "fit in" with the older students. Even though the Seniors had their practical jokes, the freshmen tried their best to ignore what was being said about them.

“Somethin’ Special” Ertzinger

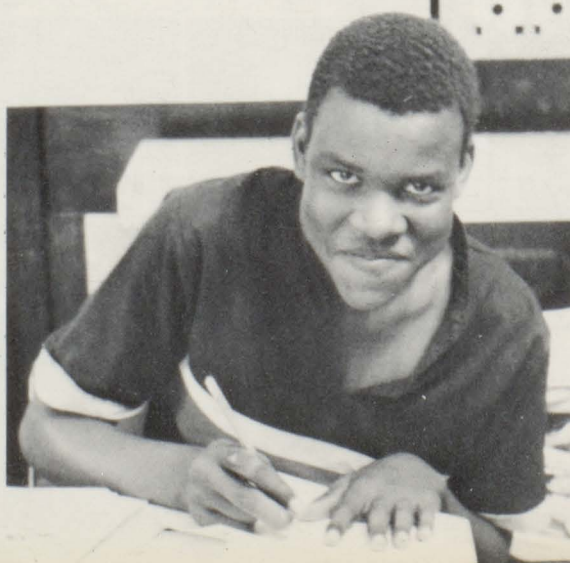

The Ertzinger Building just seemed to have sat on the corner of the campus. Not many students knew what went on in the gray house; some did not even remember it was there. But, when a student entered the building, he had an incredible feeling it was special . . . and he was right . . . “somethin’ special!”

Ladies' Night

powder puff football and backwards dance

Powder Puff has always been a thrilling experience for all—not just the junior and senior girl players. Both teams worked very hard training with the help of some of the coaches; and when that night came, all the players were filled with the overwhelming desire to conquer the other team. The outcome of the game was 12-8, in favor of the seniors.

After the junior and senior girls had the chance to show off a bit, they stepped into their dream vacation with their dream date at the Backwards Dance.

Couples dance to the music while imagining they are away at their favorite vacation land.

Senior cheerleaders— Andy Wiabel, Tyrone Thompson, Rufus Thomas, Gavin Kostelecky, Scott Sexton, Woody Woodman, and Scott Jenkins—wait at the goal line to see if their team will score.

Senior players show their spirit with the cheerleaders after their second touchdown.

Lumberjacks and Weddingbells

The Cast:

Scott Jenkins, Woody Woodman, Sawya Price, Halli Corbett, Cheri Zalfas, Kimberly Hall, Jo Linder, Abbey Day, Jaline Thomas, Angie Moody, Scott Ferguson, Scott Sexton, Sandy Bundy, Lisa Tisdale, Gavin Kostecky, Betina Murchison, Donna Kern, Christy Watts, Dana Davis, Melissa Stacey, Tommy Hellstrom, Max Huffman, Lani Gordon, Ginger Gilbert, Tyrone Thompson, Dan Quina, Rufus Thomas, Andy Waibel, Steve Brock, George Halliday, Missy Taylor, Shane Clemmons, Mitchell Strong

Born to perform

As the curtains opened, the belles had just arrived from Boston. The lumberjacks gave them a hearty welcome, since they were desperate for wives. Maw Scrubbs and her "brood," along with Mayor Crook, did their best (which wasn't very good) to drive the brides back to New England. Like most stories, this one had a happy ending with all the weddingbells and lumberjacks "tying the knot."

It takes a lot of hard work to put on a play, and Scott Sexton and Scott Jenkins do their part by building props.

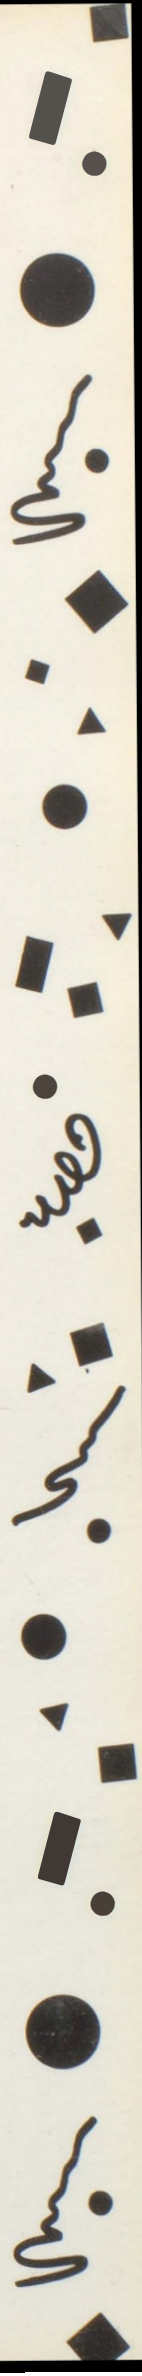

Nellie (Halli Corbett) and Jennie (Sawya Price) are not impressed by the lessons being taught by Miss Charity Jones (Christy Watts).

Missy Taylor spends a few minutes in the dressing room trying to get into her "Maw Scrubbs" character.

A leaking roof causes the migration of the belles (Ginger Gilbert, Angie Moody, Cheri Zalfas, Donna Kern, Abbey Day, and Lisa Tisdale) from the bedrooms upstairs, to the hotel lobby.

Tyrone Thompson sings and the other lumberjacks agree that "beans for breakfast, lunch, and dinner" just don't get it.

It was everything

but it wasn't forgettable

It was a year not to be forgotten, locally and nationally. Locally, the new county jail was finally completed, as was the remodeling of the court house; the goal of $70,000 was reached so that the depot could be saved, and a new United States post office was begun on Highway 31. The finishing touches were put on the new Pine Grove School, as the great campaign was undertaken to pass the "school tax" bill so that new schools throughout the county could be built, but some things were just not meant to be. Within the county and state, the Mobile Federal District Court, with Judge Hand presiding, decided that many of the students textbooks used by the county and the state contained the "godless religion of Humanism." So, American History classes had to make do for part of the second semester without their textbooks.

Nationally, the news was more dramatic. A major scandal was revealed which involved the United States selling arms to Iran to raise money for the Contras in Nicaragua. As the Iranian arms issue kept all of the front pages filled, other issues were appearing to shock us Americans even further, Marine soldiers stationed in the Soviet Union were found to be spies, and the new American Embassy in Moscow was bugged. None of us would ever forget Jim and Tammy Bakker and the scandals of their P.T.L. (Pass the Loot) network. And finally on a sadder note we will all remember Vince Ulmer and the other victims of the "Stark" bombing.

Yes, 1987 was an unforgettable year as Americans were shocked daily by revealing and surprising news that was put before us.

We cried together, laughed together, and grew closer together.

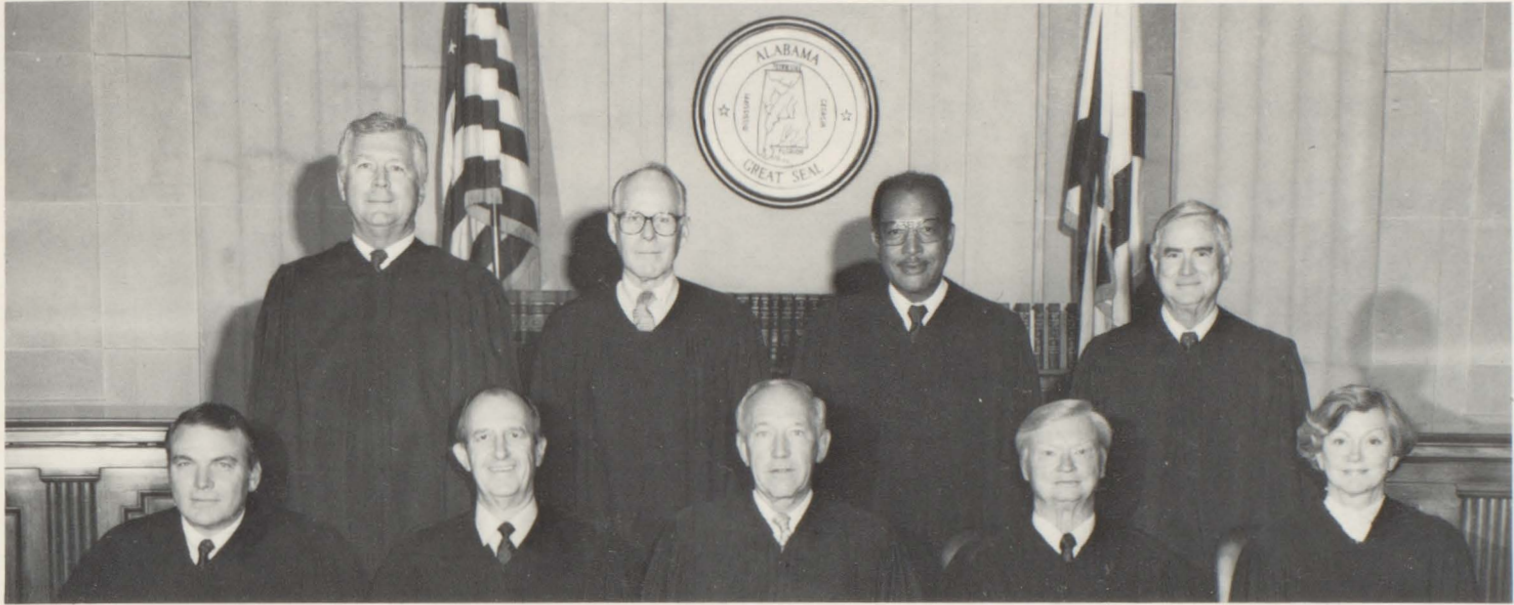

News across America.

Weekend:

non-stop energy

Bloodshot eyes, worn out fingers, and strained brains were the result of a five day imprisonment, commonly called school.

As three o'clock rolled around on Friday afternoons, a certain wave of energy passed through the students. Visions of sunny beaches, friends at McDonald's, and parties galore enlightened the mind of every person.

As the weekend progressed, the earlier symptoms caused by school-books, classrooms, and teachers quickly faded into the past.

Non-stop energy appropriately described a typical weekend.

Spirit & Pride Week

For many students spirit and pride week only meant wearing an unusual pendant made from construction paper and glue, buying an outrageous number of balloons in order to support your class, or doing a ridiculous cheer on club day. However, for others, spirit and pride week meant much more. They thought of it as a creative idea which was an accumulation of work and time. They questioned such ideas as, "How could construction paper possess so much spirit" or "How could balloons exemplify such detailed pride?" These types of meditated questions were what made the entire week such a success. The most memorable event of this successful week was the pep rally. Unconfined emotions were raised to their heights as students released over 1500 colorful balloons. Upon this release, love and support were bound together as everyone watched those inanimate objects possessing human qualities, drift into the wind hovering spirit and pride over everyone below.

Passport

to anywhere

In the hectic routines of campus life, many students often felt the necessity of getting away from the old orange and black and escaping to . . . anywhere. "Anywhere" was wherever school was not, and wherever excitement and adventure were. Whether the final destination of "anywhere" was to the white sands of Gulf Shores or to the streets of Broadway, students gained a new sense of adventure and exploration which helped them to overcome the epidemic of boredom.

More than just . . . Organizations

Fundraisers, blood drives, and candy grams were among the many projects sponsored by our organizations. Through the hard work and dedication of the students, these projects proved to be quite successful. Every member, through his or her club, learned to appreciate each other, and the unity of the members produced first rate organizations. The traditions of these organizations have been active for many years and will continue in the years to come.

Reach for a world

Whether we were doing research papers, or just trying to find a book to make the time after semester exams shorter, the members of the Library Science Club were there to help us. We also learned to reach for new exciting worlds through reading books.

Smart Moves

Practices, practices, and more practices kept the Scholars' Bowl members on their toes for upcoming matches and competition. They were ready to make the smart moves needed to win, and they did! Both the Junior and Senior Varsities won the Baldwin County competition for the third year in a row. They were named county champs and retired the Faulkner Cup.

Hard work brought admiration from classmates and faculty. After another successful, fun-filled year, the Scholars' Bowl team could look back on a job well done.

Knock, knock, knock . . . "Excuse me, John Smith needs to come to the office." Getting people out of class was one of the many jobs office workers did. They also ran errands, answered phones, and did anything else they were asked to do. Every minute of their jobs might not have been fun, but the students were able to see a side of the administrators and administration that most students didn't see. Yes, the job was hard, but it was fun, too; and if you asked the workers, most of them would say they'd do it again next year.

Spanish Club

Working for results

Working for results and more was just what the Spanish Club did. The year began when their entry in the Homecoming Parade won first place. The club also made frequent visits to the first grade to teach them Spanish words, in order to aid the interest in the language. The members have contributed to many other projects such as the Ertzinger Building. Their help in these projects was appreciated by everyone.

A Step Ahead

Computers have become an important asset to our school. Without them the technology we know today would not be the same. The computer lab designed a new club to help open the world of computers to students ranging from 7 to 18 years of age. Therefore, COAST finished its first year a success.

Together

till the end

Cooking, sewing, and cleaning may have seemed like a girl's place of superiority, but no more. Boys, together with girls, learned the basics of survival through the club Future Homemakers of America. They were taught not only these basics, but the important skills of nutrition, health, and family relations.

Through FHA, the members have "together" learned to help themselves and their community.

FHA

1986-87 FHA members are: Mrs. Jean Thompson, Colleen Stevens, Tyrone Thompson, Miranda Crook, Mrs. O. Carroll, Rosie Jenkins, Genice Stacey, Sara Jarrel, Lynn Williams, Genetta Graves, Twana Gully, Vivian Macon, Rejoice McCall, Veronica Williams, Yolanda Cooks, Keshia Cox, Carla Thomas, Sarlan Bryant, Paulette Williams, Michelle Caldwell, Kathleen Perry, Shelia Bryars, Heather Williams, Jamie Douglas, Tonia Weekley, June Spears, Stephanie Hastings, Ginger Johnson, Dorise Johnson, Betty Thomas, Gina Stewart, Gena Cox, Sonia Hinote, Pam McQuirey, Angie Walton, Thersa Hall.

Cherman Logan proves boys can handle the "motherly duties" as well as the girls.

Getting

The Future Farmers of America did a great deal to keep themselves busy throughout the year. For instance, they had their annual banquet where various students were recognized for their hard work shown in learning the basics skills in agriculture.

In this way and in many others, FFA prepared themselves for future careers.

Sophomore Clint Koen wonders why measuring on a tree trunk could be so important in agriculture.

Troy Presley and Clint Koen, under the watchful eyes of Mr. McCants and Brian Smith, learn the right way to survey land.

1986-87 FFA members are: Vickie Henderson, Billy Lingfeather, Timothy Shivers, Jeremy Cox, David Chafin, Mr. McCants, Troy Presley, Marion Savowekin, Warren Bolden, Reginald Gray, Boniface Buchanan, Lynn Williams, Micheal Cox, Lisa Reynolds, Colleen Stevens, Micheal Dixon, Barton Phillips, Rodney McCall, Ronnie Brown, Willie Finklea, Jenetta Adams, Jody Hall, Jim Bird, Dan Thomas, Rusty White, Wess Reid, Jason Grimes, Roger King, Randell Lindsey, Matthew Barnette, Dennis Vincent, Brett Davidson, David Buck, Tim Bracken, Jamie Morris, Corey Dunnigan, James Gray, Micheal Austin, Stacey Hooks, Mark Anderson, Carlos Andrews, Esaw Stevens, Vincent Gray, Ronald Stevens.

SGA

Rising above the crowd

SGA—Student Government Association. Though many may not have known about the SGA, it was the backbone of our school. It was used as the communication between the students and the principal. SGA sponsored the Homecoming Dance, Homecoming Parade and many other activities that were enjoyed by the student body. The money made at these events was always used for a good cause. Even though it was not widely known, SGA was rising above the crowd.

Not just a name, but a symbol

KEY CLUB

Key Club is not just the name of an organization. It is a feeling of accomplishment, a symbol for all to follow.

Through the year, Key Club sponsored roadblocks and blood drives for the betterment of our community. At a moments notice, they were there to help where help was needed.

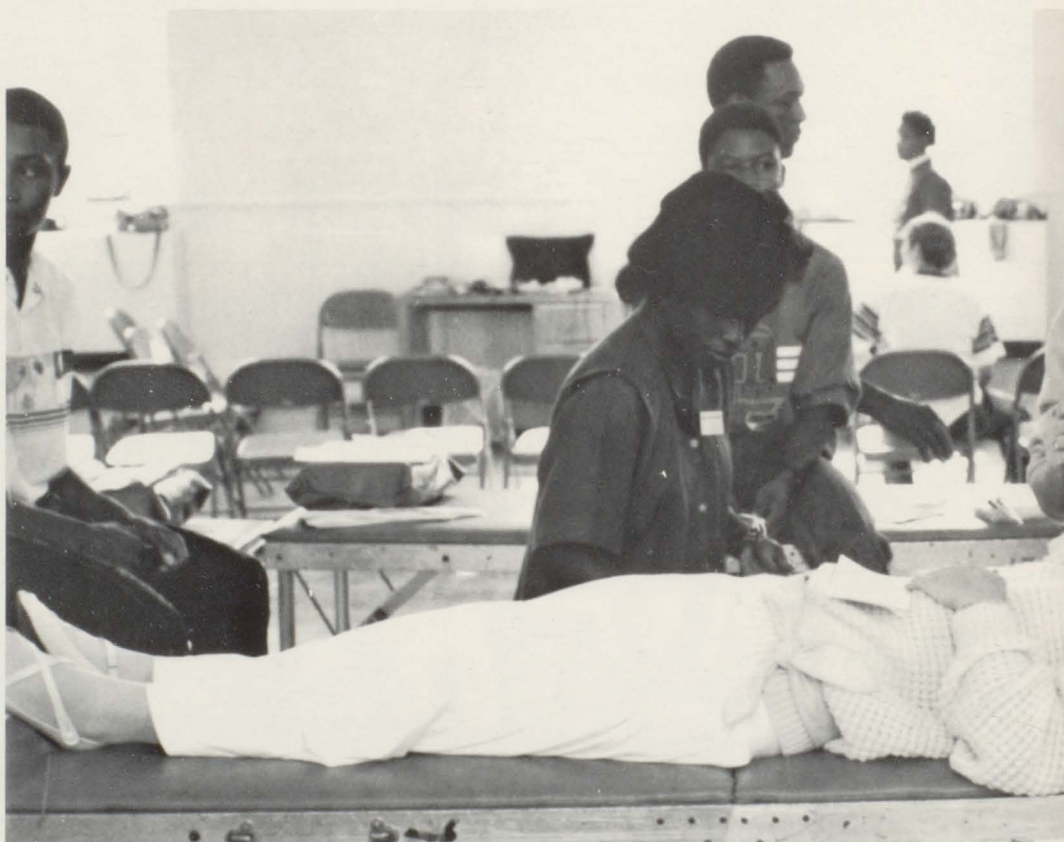

They exemplified what America is based upon—hardwork, motivation, and a little time set aside for play. Key Club set goals which everyone tried to obtain. Members realized that the service, devotion, and dedication which they learned through Key Club would stay with them throughout their lives.

Sponsor George Price and Jeffery Redmon spend one of their many Saturdays with Key Club helping out the community.

Tiffany Watts and Gavin Kostecky show off their two man stunt pyramid and try to out do the cheerleaders.

"There will be a very important Interact meeting in Mr. Wray Stewart's room today at lunch." This was heard more often than some members cared to remember.

The Interact Club consisted of freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior boys and ten senior favorites. The members gave their time and effort to help support the people in their community. They raised money after school with roadblocks and going door-to-door. The Interact members have set the standards for the members of tomorrow.

Pam Averitt, Shane Robinson, Nancy McGill, Chad Molyneaux, Duane Mitchen, Tiffany Watts and Kenny Kennedy all show their "Pride in Bay Minette" by helping Mrs. McInnish with the trolley rides in the city.

cream of the crop

The National Honor Society, which stands for leadership, character, and scholarship, played a major role in this year's school activities. The club began the year with the organization of "Pride Week" and then followed up with the selling of carnations at Christmas. NHS also sold candygrams for Valentine's Day and successfully planned the annual Easter Egg Hunt for the students in the Ertzinger building. The work and community services contributed by the "cream of the crop" members proved to continue the high standards of the Bay Minette chapter of the NHS.

Senior member, Bruce Tenison, contributes his spare time in order to get ready for "Pride Week."

The 1986-87 NHS members are Scott Sexton, Lisa White, Dawn Helms, Bruce Tenison, Theresa Daniels, Kelli Wilson, Cheryl Davis, Kim Hall, Tiffany Watts, Lisa Tisdale, Dana Davis, Lynn Little, Tammy Trawick, Angie Moody, Kim Newberry, Toni Reid, Missy Taylor, Becky Jackson, Kym Rhodes, Betina Murchinson, Melissa Stacey, Mitchell Strong, Joey Cofer, Steve Cheatam, Shane Clemmons.

More than just... Vocational FBLA: Students were taught the business and secretarial skills that were needed for success.

Trowel trades: Students applied the skills they learned by laying a new brick floor in the conference room.

Drafting: Students helped the community by designing Dickens Village at Christmas.

AC/Ref.: Fixing refrigerators and washers and dryers were just a few of the things done by Mr. McGinn's class.

Welding: It was more than just a class, it was people working for one goal: success.

Marketing: Students were taught all aspects of business such as advertising, sales, and job training.

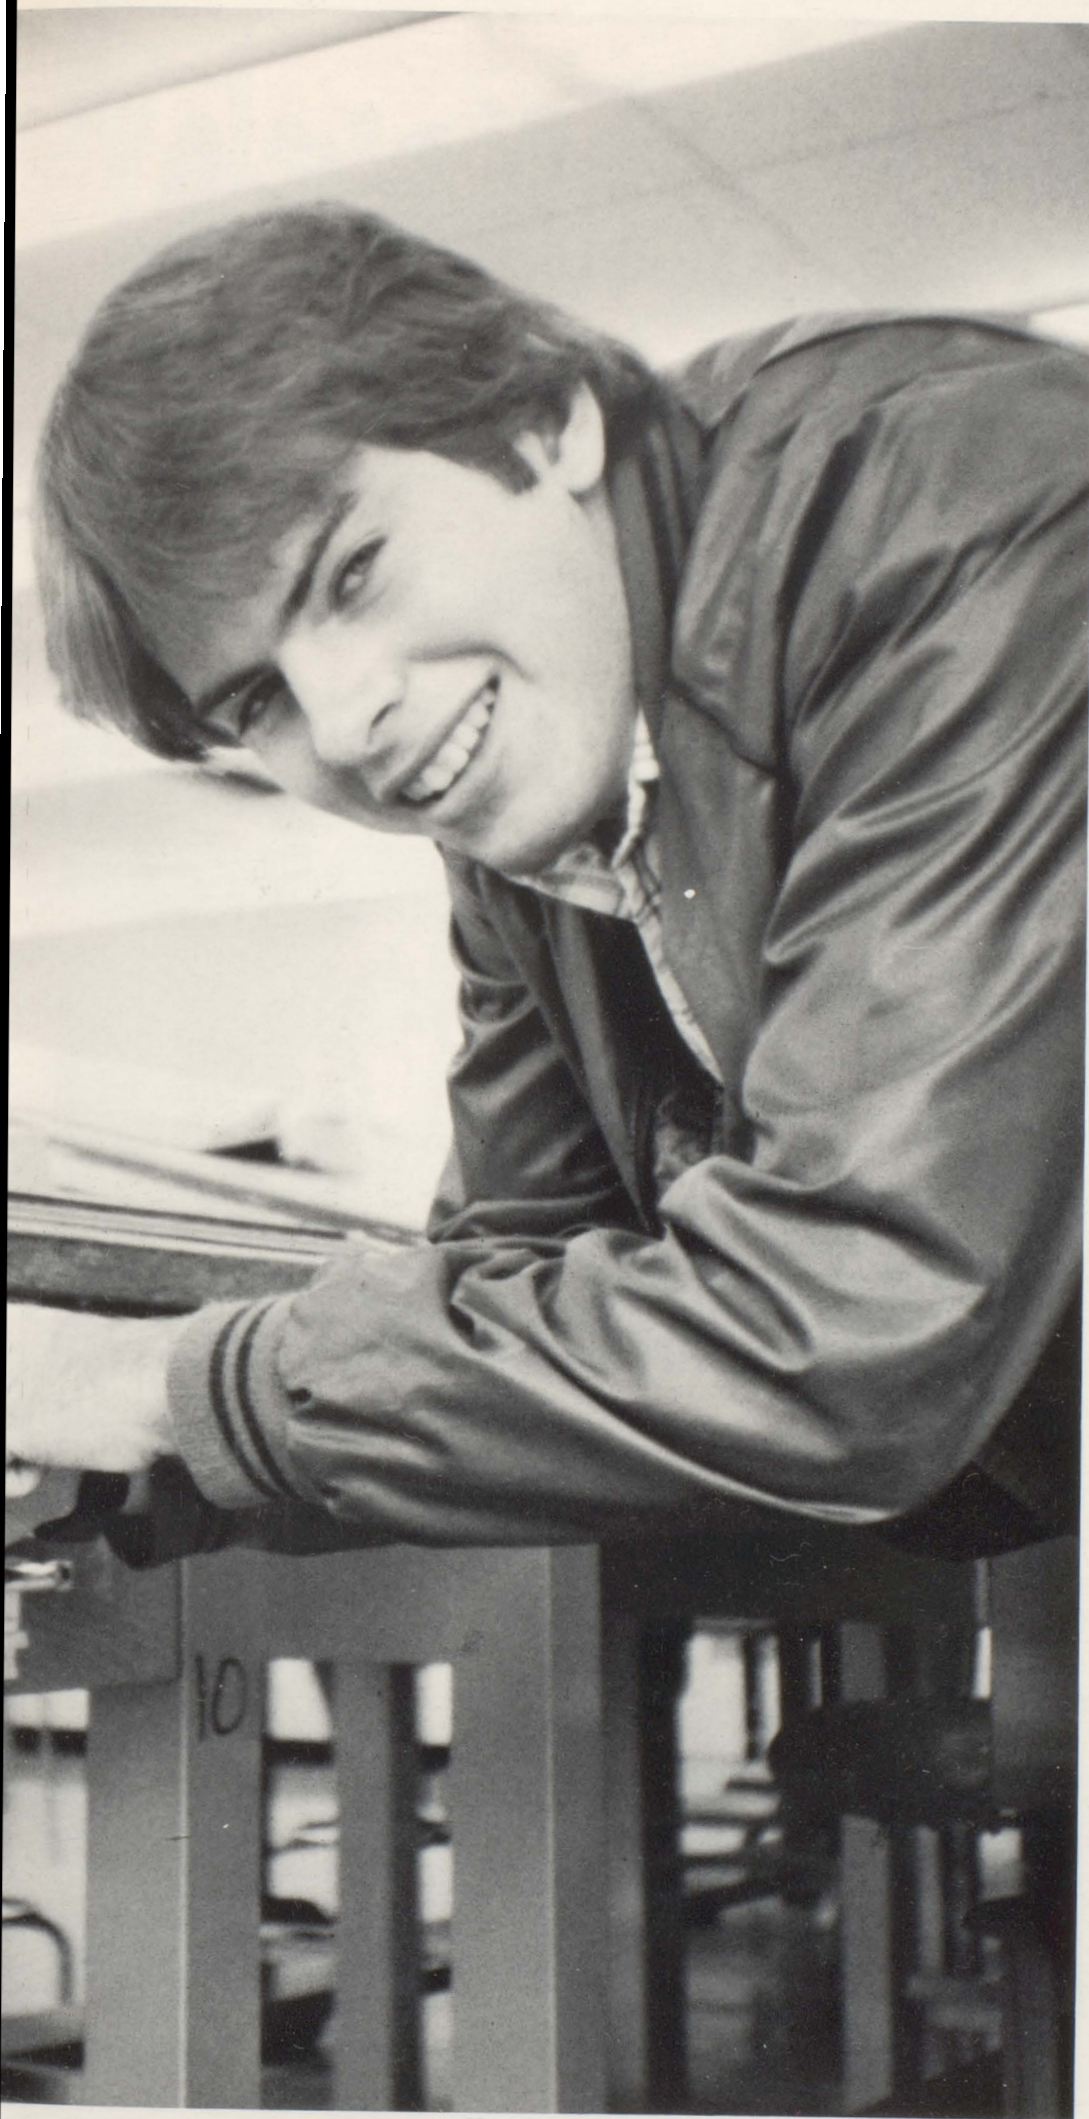

Electronics: Repairing radios and T.V.'s were the students main priority.

Child care/Clothing: Students were in charge of a day care center where they taught children their ABC's and 1-2-3's. In clothing one of the advantages was being able to make your own clothes.

Carpentry: Students learned how to frame houses and the basics of construction.

Mechanics: Students received hands-on experience in repairing cars and tractors.

Future Business Leaders of America were really on the ball and ready to work when instructed or even on a volunteer basis. They worked with the Department of Human Resources at Christmas to distribute food and toys and selected two children from the Angel Tree and provided clothes and toys for them. Three volunteer students also did clerical work for the Department of Human Resources.

FBLA, under the instruction of Martha L. Hall, Catherine H. Long, and Mary H. Messick went to the District III Contest, held on March 21, 1987. At the District III meeting they had the following winners: Teresa Daniels, 2nd place, Miss FBLA; Randy Presley, 1st place, Mr. FBLA; Arnie Williams, 3rd place, Clerk-Typist I; Elaine Sutherland, 1st place, Data Processing; Michele Brown, 2nd place, Office Procedures; Tammy Shiver, 2nd place, Stenographer I.

This year was the first year for the Co-op program in business education. The students received pay for their work and also received on-the-job training which was invaluable when they entered the job market.

Draw your own conclusions

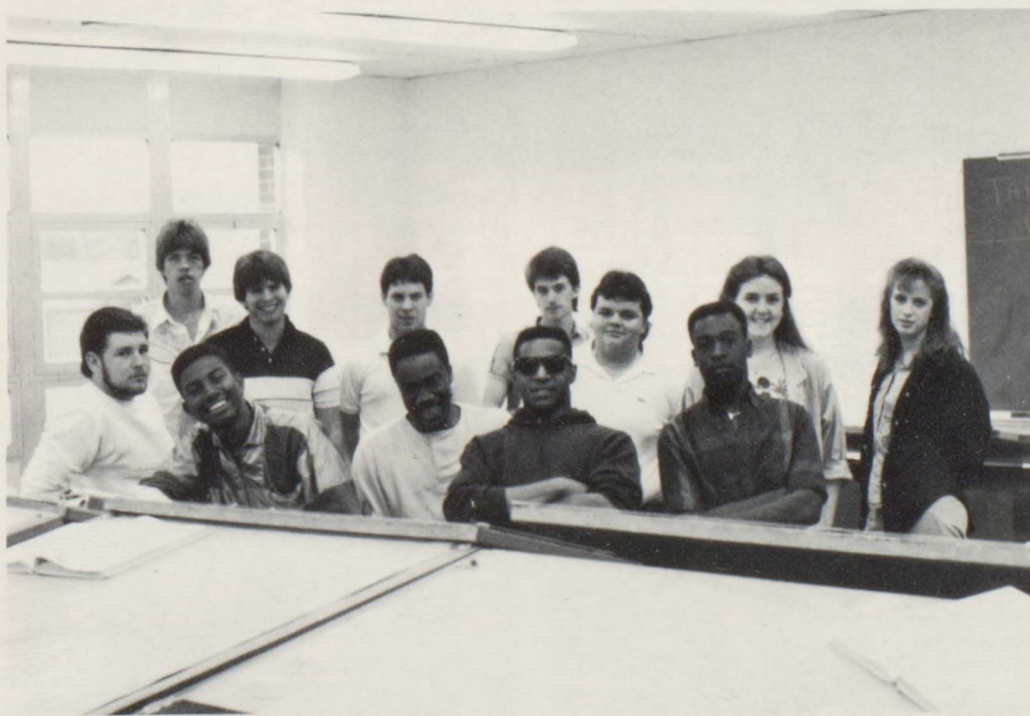

There were many jobs offered in the drafting field, a few of these were artist, designer, engineer and architect. Once a student had completed training, he was qualified to receive advanced credit at a technical college or to enter pre-engineering courses. Also, drafting students had the choice of entering the job market as an entry-level draftsman or pursuing a military career that related to his technical training.

Marketing

making money

Marketing education is a program of instruction in merchandising, marketing, and management. In their junior year students attended classes at the vocational center every morning where they learned entry-level job skills such as cash register operations, salesmanship, advertising and display. These skills prepared students for placement on their jobs during their senior year in the marketing program.

Seniors attended the marketing class two afternoons a week and left school after 3rd period in order to go into work at their training station. The marketing students also operated the school store at the vocational center.

Repairing

for the future

Mechanics was successful for Mr. J.C. Long, for he was able to teach his students all they needed to repair an automobile. Mechanics offered the hands-on experience which insured the confidence of the student to repair an automobile for the school. Along with repairing an automobile well, the mechanics class understood that the satisfaction of the customer was important also.

Vocational

faculty

The purpose of the Bay Minnette Area Vocational Center was to enhance and round out the curriculum of the total school program. The fourteen faculty members and four support personnel work hard for the students and their education. The focus of attention and efforts of those who were responsible for planning and executing an effective vocational program at the BMAVC was always aimed at "fulfilling the needs."

Sports

From the football field on Friday nights to the baseball diamond in March, we, the fans, were always there enjoying the excitement of sports. The Tigers captured the competitive spirit. Whether it was running track, playing golf, or shooting baskets, we put our best foot forward.

Game scores and season records may have been the usual indicators of a team as a winner or loser; but in our hearts, our athletes were winners whatever the sport may have been.

Changes

in attitude

While most people spent their summertime tanning at the beach or working in an air conditioned office, there were those who were determined to sweat it out.

Although the blazing sun scorched their skin, they were still required to attend practices daily. Dripping with perspiration, the football players tried to improve their tackling, running, and passing skills. Despite the strained muscles and overworked bodies, the players were still keyed up to work off their endless practice hours. Though the season turned out to be a disappointment, the team's attitude was something to be proud of.

The story

behind the score

Why play football for a losing team? Why try to be your best? Why hold your head high in the face of defeat? Why work to be a loser? These questions were thrown to every player at the first of the season. But after 3 wins, the same people who threw the questions, caught the answers. Winning three out of ten games may not be considered a good season to most people; but to some of the players, it was the first time to experience victory. With the team's influence this pride spread through every vein of the school. Although play-off hopes were dashed, the mighty Tigers still held their heads high. During a period of three months, this team learned the most fundamental asset to football: teamwork. They pulled together to work toward one common goal: to improve with each game. And that's what they did. Before looking at the wins and losses column, first look at the story behind the score.

With the pointing of a finger, Scott Jenkins tells Robertsdale that the fight has only just begun.

With the ball now in his hands, Arnie Williams makes sure nothing will stand between him and the end zone.

Patrick Bolden proves to be an asset to the defense by stopping the advancing runner while James Johnson and Cory Bryant wait on stand-by.

Chris Stevens, the "Sparkplug" of the team, shows off his running skills as he goes for a touchdown.

The faces of Coaches Harris and McCollough sum up the attitude of the whole season: waiting with anticipation.

Looking over the backfield, Randy Phillips makes sure of the positions before calling for the snap.

Rusty Hinson's foot proves its worth as it kicks the ball away from the Bears' end zone.

Missy Taylor and Stephanie Wise prove that Robertsdale High School does have a bus.

for spirit

What's a football game without chants, a basketball game without jumps, or a pep-rally without pep? Games like these just would not be the same without cheerleaders. They boost the spirit of the students as well as that of the community, and this year's varsity cheerleaders were no exception.

For these ten girls, practice for the football season began long before school started. The early summer was filled with hard work and determination as they prepared for clinic. During the week of July 15-18, they attended the Universal Cheerleading Association Camp at Troy State University. There, they received superior ribbons in all ten evaluations, two spirit sticks, and one overall spirit stick. Upon their return, practice to perfect their cheers, chants, and pyramids was in full swing again.

Football season was a success, even though the score did not always match the high spirit of the fans and cheerleaders. The weekly pep-rallies were what kept everybody going, especially the players. Basketball season was not much different, as the cheerleaders worked to keep the spirit up and the mighty Tigers moving forward to victory.

This was a year the varsity cheerleaders, especially the seniors, would never forget. For these were the things memories were made of.

Guts,

Pride, and Pain

Junior varsity football team closed their season with a record of 0-5. Despite the scoreboard they still moved ahead with the determination to prove they had what it took to be a together team. At the same time they had hopes of becoming starters for the varsity team. Even though their fan attendance was low, their spirit was high. They all played well and each and everyone of them was devoted to doing his best, which took us back to Coach Harris' words, he said, "They still carried on with a lot of determination, despite their losses!"

Anxiously awaiting the signal from the sidelines, Derrick Paul and the rest of the defense take time for a breather.

Let your

spirit soar

The Junior Varsity cheerleaders had an unforgettable year, a year full of activity and dedication. They had the chance to cheer on JV football players and gave them the needed support and strength to continue. For newcomers like Kim Bradley and Lee Powell, along with the other six, they had the chance to be a part of that five letter word that was so important to B.C.H.S. students and faculty—P.R.I.D.E. They were always there whatever the outcome was.

Set

for victory

The Baldwin County Lady Tigers won only 44% of their games this year. Even though this was not half, it was enough to place them 2nd in the county. The record itself showed the difficulty of the competition.

Betty Clemmons, volleyball coach, was proud to have Renee Dortch and Patt Carter on the All-County Player's list. Lisa Morrison and Patt Carter were also named the most valuable players of the all-county team.

Although the Lady Tigers weren't at the top of the ranks, they pulled through and made the best of the season.

Through a lot of hard work and disappointments, the mighty Tigers came through with a win over Fairhope to capture the Area Four Championship. Although defeated in the first round of the Sub-State Tournament by Davidson, they brought a sense of pride to the school that spread throughout the campus.

Players chosen for All-County team were: Quinn Higgins, Patrick Bolden, and Arnie Williams. Those chosen for All-Tournament team included: Quinn Higgins, Keiven Mixson, and Arnie Williams.

Setting

the foundation

Amid the excitement, the Junior Varsity Boys' Basketball team, under the supervision of Coach Ben Harris, tallied a record of 9-7 and kicked their season off with a 49-42 win over UMS. Even though the team suffered disappointments such as their losses to Foley and Murphy, their wins over Atmore and Mary Montgomery showed that their pride suffered no loss. Through their difficulties, taking advantage of favorable opportunities, and most of all their team effort, JV basketball players made the most of their season. The key to their season was Coach Harris's knowledge of the game, his coaching ability, and each player's athletic ability to win and to escape defeat.

JV player Holmes Hendrickson gives that added stretch to gain that winning point.

Willie Caldwell shows good form as he goes up for a dump.

The girls' basketball team learned to strive for excellence, although they did not win a lot of their games. Missy Taylor said, "Coach Todd offered the support the team needed through the year." The team had two players that proved their worth. Lisa Morrison was chosen for the all-area tournament team and the second all-county team; Tawana Bolling was entered in the first all-county team. The team showed they were good sports, even if they had to lose to prove it.

Ladies'

county champs

Softball—a game which uses a 12 inch ball hit by a bat in order to advance around four bases for the purpose of scoring a run. To a group of 19 girls, the definition became their life. Many afternoons the team spent long hours on the field in order to improve their record. Although they suffered through a disappointing season, the Lady Tigers ended the year as county champions. Three members of the team were named to the All-County Team. These included Patt Carter, Heather Willis, and Gay Turbeville. Turbeville was also chosen the Most Valuable Player of the tournament.

Fore the record

Although golf was an individual sport, team unity was what kept the golfers out of the rough. Because of each player's dedication and consistency, each trial or error brought forth experience which helped the team maintain a competitive attitude throughout the season. Because of good practices and talent from such players as Todd King, Jim Jordan, and Trey Easley, the team suffered no major set backs. Due to Coach Pridgeons supervision and each player's attentiveness the season was brought to a very good end.

On your mark . . .

Running and jumping is a part of most little boys and girls' daily routing: sometimes this activity stretched into adolescence. These early childhood games helped to provide us with some very outstanding members on the varsity track team. However, this experience and natural talent had to be nurtured by practices every Monday after school. The team had good showings by Arnie Williams, Stacy Hooks, and Karen Roley, who traveled to Selma for the County meet, and McKeber Mason who participated in the sectional meet. We saw from their achievements that their sweating, training, and injuries paid off.

Everybody loves sports, but not necessarily the same ones. For some people, school sports like football, basketball, and baseball were enough, but for others a little something different was needed. This was where extracurricular sports like racquetball, weight lifting, tennis, horsebackriding, fishing, and skateboarding, just to name a few, came into the picture.

We, the annual staff, would like to thank you, the business community, for your support. This yearbook could not have been produced without you. The approximate cost for this publication was over 22,000 dollars. If it had not been for you, the cost would have been $40 per book, and many students could not have afforded this; you helped to change that. Thanks again, Bay Minette, we could not have done this without you.

Poetry

festival

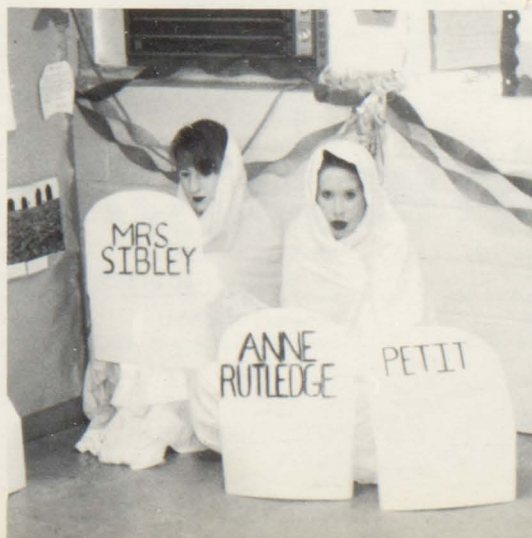

Patrick Coleman as Carl Sandburg recites "The Grass," as Carol Banning and Susan Chason look on.

Brian Creps as Edgar Lee Masters sings "Spoon River Anthology."

Julie Reese and Regina Cook really get into the "spirit" of the festival

Dennis Perry was one of the many who were honored at the banquet.

Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Pridgeon explain the purpose for the academic banquet.

Dawn Helms, National Honor Society President, welcomes everyone to the banquet.

Kelli Newberry is recognized by Mr. Duck for being Valedictorian.

Change of pace

Water balloons flying, ice chests being filled with water and the field house being flooded were just some of the sights seen at the senior picnic. It was a lot of fun for everyone, including the teachers; they tried to stay out of the action but eventually ended up joining in the fun. The afternoon was funfilled and very relaxing. It gave everyone a chance to get away from the hassles of everyday life at school.

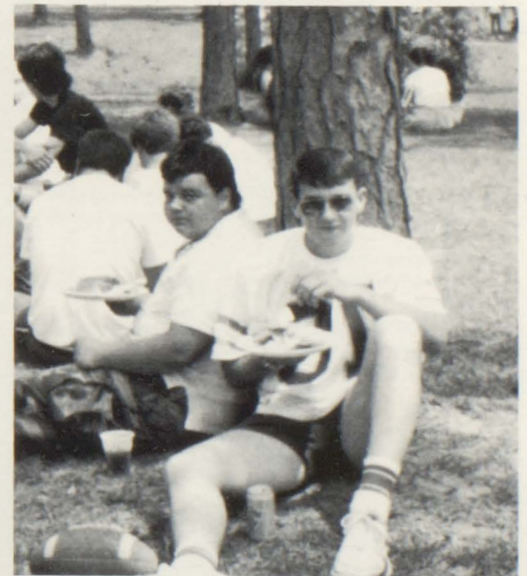

Dennis Perry and Scott Lambert talk after they finished their lunch.

Tawania Gulley, Sandy Lewis and friends, with their plates loaded up, sit down and enjoy the meal.

Jo Linder guards her food while Lani Gordon dodges a water balloon.

Mr. Duck joins in on the fun by trying to decide which Kim Hall to bomb.

Doug Herrin and Tim Stewart need the support of a tree to be able to sit up after stuffing their faces.

Class of 1987

More Than

Jeff Malone finds that sitting in class is a little bit more bearable when you take a break and think about A.E.A.

Just . . .

Kelly Bullin and Amy Johns seem to enjoy recess, but we're not sure about Jennifer Burton.

Gwen Godbey escapes the hassles of sixth period by listening to her favorite tape.

As the big day drew closer, memories of the past year began to fill our heads. We remembered how it felt to finally win a football game and recalled that fun-filled week of Homecoming. During the boring months from December to February, we were surprised with gifts of carnations and candygrams. We entertained ourselves by going to parties at old live oak and just riding around uptown with friends. Who could ever forget partying and getting sunburned at Gulf Shores during Spring Break? The juniors and seniors would look back on the Prom for years to come; how could they forget a night like that? And, oh my gosh, were those junior and senior girls out there on the field playing Powder Puff football?

Anthony Harris and Josh Harris start their day the same way every morning, with the Pledge of Alligence.

After 175 days, even Gavin was tired of saying, "May I have your attention for morning annoucemnts."

Bill Bradford "makes sure" that Dana Davis is head over heels about being the annual's mascot.

1 • 7 • 5 Days

Then finally, it seemed there was nothing left but graduation. What would we do then? Oh yes, first there would be sunny days at the beach, and lazy days spent at home but then we would have to go on to something new. For the underclassmen it was another year here; for the seniors, it was on to a life of their own, but they would never forget that it had been "more than just" 12 years of school, it had been . . .

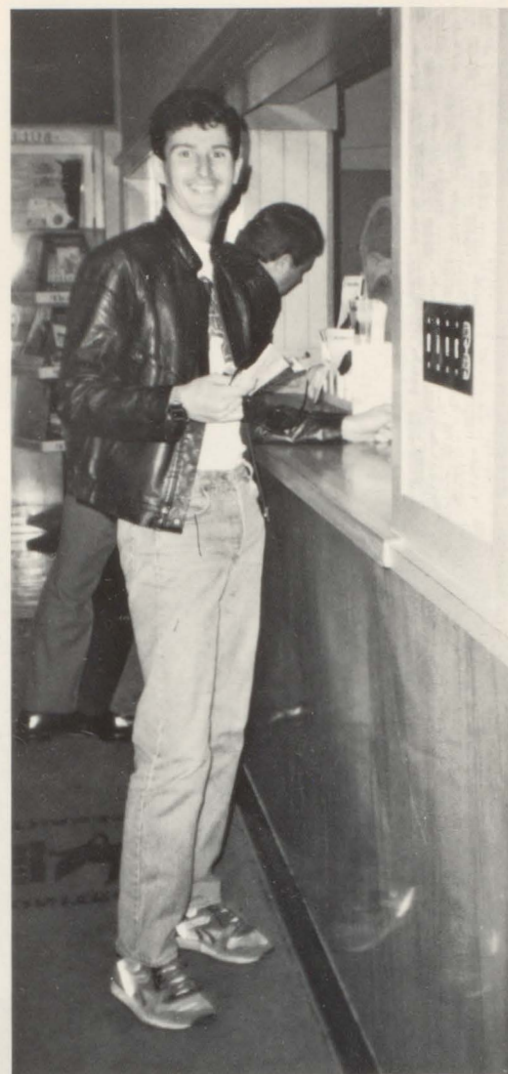

Freddie Daniels and Joey Akins spend their recess enjoying the company of friends.

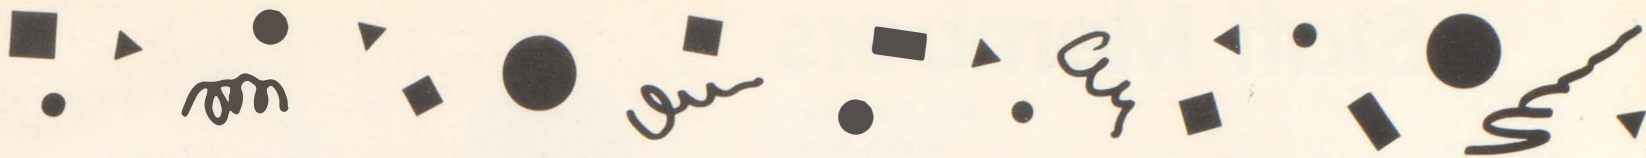

No, It is not snowing at Sawya Price's house.

John Buck and Scott Jenkins take in the sights of a softball game.

Chris Harville finds the time to mail a few letters.

Sonja Davis and Timothy Mason find time to talk between classes.

"What do you mean my layout was due yesterday" Woody Woodman asked.

Editor's Remarks

This was a hard year for the entire staff. We asked everyone to do his own part and then some. We would like to thank all of you for the hard work and dedication you gave. We produced something that was "more than just . . ." a yearbook (we don't quite know how, but . . . we couldn't have done it without you.) We would also like to thank the Baldwin Times and Larry White for their generous donation of photos. Above all we would like to thank Mrs. Pat Hudson for being so-o-o patient and so-o-o understanding about layouts, copy, and deadlines. She was really the driving force behind the whole staff. And Mrs. Hudson, we just have to ask you, one last time, "Can we check-out?"

Colophon

Volume 65 of the Balcoala was published by the annual staff and was printed by Herff Jones Yearbooks, Montgomery, Alabama. The 615 copies of this 224 page book were printed in 100 pound Bordeaux paper. The cover was a four-color process picture. The endsheets were done in gray ink.

The body type was Avant Garde 12 point for the opening, divisions, and closing and 10 point for all other copy and 8 point for all captions. Headlines were 42 point for regular headings and 18 point for subheading. Page indentifications were 8 point Avant Garde and all rule lines were 2 point.

Most candid photos were taken by the staff. Senior and school day portraits were taken and processed by Jim Owen Photographics in Mobile.

After a long hard year, Sandy Bundy and Cheri Zalfas put the annual in its rightful place.
